

CITIZENS COM. TO KEEP TINLEY SCHOOL GOING

The Citizens' Committee for the Reopening of School has the following announcement to make at this time:-

As you all know, the desired legislation has not, as yet been enacted at Springfield, so our school board is in about the same place, financially, as they were on January 14th, when the School was reopened by your Committee. The bill presented to the State Legislature by the Representative of this District, Frank Foster, has been lost, and new plans are now being made to secure the necessary relief from other sources.

In the meantime, however, we all want the children of our Town to continue with their education, as an interruption at this time would cause them to lose something that could never be replaced.

It is realized that the many affairs that have been conducted for the benefit of this fund in the past month have been a heavy drain on the resources of some of our loyal citizens and that this manner of raising funds cannot be carried on indefinitely and continue to meet with success.

It is felt, however, that many of the citizens who have supported these various affairs would have been going elsewhere for the same class of entertainment had it not been available here, and the cause that was benefited should be sufficient to offset any difference there may have been in the class of entertainment received.

We therefore feel that we should continue as long as it is necessary to raise funds to keep the school open until the necessary legislation is passed, and that this is the best means of raising funds so everyone is given something in return for their money. We hope from day to day for the needed assistance but in the meantime it is felt that these affairs, if not run to often, should continue to meet with a measure of success.

A dance is being run by this committee in the school auditorium on Saturday evening, March 9th and we hope it will be well attended. The Triangle Club is planning a Basketball tournament for the benefit of the fund, to be held the last part of March. Any organization wishing to help further should get in touch with the Committee.

The School Teachers and janitor have agreed to go along with this plan and while we do not look for the success that attended our efforts during the first month, we would like to be able to give each one enough to pay their necessary expenses.

This would seem to be an appropriate time to give an advance vote of thanks to all who have assisted so far, and before the Committee is disbanded proper letters of thanks will be sent out.

We sincerely hope that the needed relief will be given in the very near future so that these measures may be discontinued but in the meantime we ask your continued support.

Orland Park Man On Federal Rural Rehabilitation Com.

Rev. Paul T. Sanders of the Orland Community Center Foundation, has been appointed as one of a committee of five from Cook County to represent this section of the county on the Rural Rehabilitation Committee.

This committee represents the Illinois Rural Rehabilitation Corporation and is a corporation chartered to administer government funds for the rehabilitation of farmers. This is a constructive move to aid farmers in distress thru long term supervised loans. The committee will pass upon all loans made.

There will also be a constructive program of establishing the right type of needy people on the farm and making it possible for them to maintain themselves thru the supervision of a trained director.

This plan is different than the drought and other types of relief in that it is a constructive, permanent plan to be handled under a permanent corporation. There will be more detailed information available in the very near future.

Tinley School Principal Resigns

Albert Mayer, principal of the Tinley Park public school caused consternation when he tendered his resignation to the Tinley Park Board of Education the forepart of the week. Did You Ever Hear A Singing Mouse?

ORLAND PUPILS ENTER LEGION ESSAY CONTEST

Announcement has been made of a state-wide essay contest which is being sponsored by the American Legion as part of its Americanism program. This contest will be open to all high school students in the state of Illinois.

The subject, "The Benefits and Obligations of American Citizenship", is one that should bring home to those who participate in the contest, a realization of just how much they owe to that citizenship and should make of each and every one of them a better American because of the expanded viewpoint gained thereby.

Each contestant will write a paper on the assigned subject of not less than 1000 words or more than 3000 words.

Mr. Donisage, principal of the Orland Park high school will supervise the contest for that high school and will advise and assist all contestants in their work. All papers must be completed and turned over to him on or before May 25th. The papers will be reviewed and the winners in the local contest selected before June 22, by a committee appointed by the Americanism Chairman of the local post, and which will consist of one judge from the high school faculty and one from the Legion Post, and one from the community.

The winning papers in the local contest will be forwarded to the district chairman and will again be judged in competition with the winners of other schools in the district.

The papers of the district winners will then be sent to the Americanism Commission of the Department of Illinois at Bloomington, where they will again be judged in competition with district winners from all over the state and the state champion then determined.

The prizes are: 1st, $25.00 in cash and a gold medal; 2nd, silver medal; 3rd, bronze medal.

Every contestant will have an equal chance and the winners will be determined solely on the merit of their papers. No contestant will sign his or her name anywhere on the paper submitted. The contestant's name and the school from which he or she comes will be written on a separate sheet of paper and attached to the essay.

Personal friendship, Legion connections or geographical influence will therefore have no determining influence on the judges in considering the papers. Merit alone will determine the winners.

Every high school boy or girl in the state is eligible to participate and the Orland Park Post of the American Legion not only invites, but urges every student in our high school to enter the contest.

Sherman S. Knox, chaplain of Orland Park Post, is Americanism chairman and will be in charge of the local contest.

A program will be rendered by the Dads, but the exact nature of it is still a secret. However, every member is urged to attend the meeting as a pleasant surprise will in all probability be sprung by the men. Every woman member should make it a point to insist on her own husband's attendance, whether he be a member or not, because—well, if by chance there should happen to be a dance—you know there just isn't enough men members of the P.T. A. to provide partners for all the ladies. And what fun is a dance if there are no partners to dance with. So—a word to the wise should be sufficient.

Oak Park has a couple of postmasters. That's one more than it has any use for. But Lester B. McAllister refuses to resign—even in spite of the fact that Joseph Lynch, former union official, has been appointed to succeed him. Lynch was ordered by the postmaster general's office to take over his new duties. He did so. But Oak Park friends of McAllister have deluged the government with demands that he be put back on the job. And McAllister says he's still postmaster.

Construction of new buildings, to cost $325,000, have begun at the Illinois School for the Deaf at Jacksonville. Final authorization for the project was received from the Federal Public Works administration by the division of architecture and engineering, state department of public works and buildings. The unit will consist of two dormitories connected by a 16-room school building, and will require a tunnel for heat and water mains, a new smokestack and a 500 horse power boiler for the power plant. It is expected that the project will be completed in time for the opening of the 1935 fall term of school.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

THE BOLDNESS OF TERROR
THE GOSHAWK

For peace and safety pray beware,
And never take a foolish dare.

NEVER in his life had Reddy Fox felt more uncomfortable than he did as he stole up through the Old Orchard toward Farmer Brown's henyard in broad daylight. Terror the Goshawk had dared him to visit the henyard and steal a hen while Farmer Brown was about. All the way there Reddy hoped that Farmer Brown would not be about. He hoped that no one would be about. He wished with all his heart that he had kept his tongue still when he had met Terror, and so have avoided this unpleasant scrape.

The truth is, Reddy didn't dare visit that henyard when Farmer Brown or Farmer Brown's Boy was about. He knew that he wouldn't dare go beyond the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard if he should find that anyone was near that henyard. So he hoped and hoped that when he got there the way would be clear, for he knew that Terror the Goshawk was sitting in the top of a tall tree where he could watch all that went on.

When Reddy reached the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard and peeped over, his heart sank, for Farmer Brown himself was in the henyard feeding the hens. Reddy stopped right where he was. Nothing could have induced him to go a step nearer. "Anyway," muttered Reddy to himself, "Terror won't dare go any nearer, and so we'll be even. No one would dare visit that henyard and steal a hen right under Farmer Brown's nose. No one is bold enough to do a thing like that."

Reddy looked back to where Terror the Goshawk was sitting. Suddenly Terror spread his great wings and shot out from that tree straight toward Reddy. Reddy could not but admire the speed with which he flew. Straight over the Old Orchard he came, and swooping down just above Reddy's head, he cried, "Coward!" and then shot up into the air and over Farmer Brown's henyard. There he made a little circle and then shot down like a thunderbolt, seizing a hen in his great claws only a few feet from where Farmer Brown was standing. Before Farmer Brown could move he was in the air again carrying away that fat hen. Farmer Brown yelled. All the hens screamed and raced for the henhouse. Terror paid no attention either to Farmer Brown or the frightened hens. Once more he flew low just over Reddy's head and once more cried, "Coward!" then swiftly disappeared over in the Green Forest. He had made good his dare.

As for Reddy Fox, he sneaked away toward the Old Pasture. In his heart he admired the boldness of Terror the Goshawk, but he hated him more than ever, and that hate grew as he thought of the fine breakfast Terror was enjoying while he himself could find nothing to put in his empty stomach.

A MIRACLE

By ANNE CAMPBELL

I SAW a miracle from my own door,
Spreading its glamour on my patch
of sky,
Giving me hope and bringing me once more
A dream that I supposed had passed me by.

After the rain, the darkness, and the fear,
After the lightning's flash, the tem-
pest's moan,
I read a message, comforting and dear.
That rainbow seemed to shine for me alone!

It was as if God's finger wrote for me,
Who am so seldom far from my home place:
"Beauty will find you, and felicity,
And after suffering, the rainbow's grace."

The Penny Post

The Penny Post was an institution transplanted from London by Benjamin Franklin soon after he was appointed one of the two deputy postmasters for the Colonies in 1753, and like its London counterpart, had grown up in the post office but, strictly speaking, was not a government function. The main difference between the two was that in London the profits from the local post were assigned to a court favorite, while in America they were the perquisites of the individual postmasters or the carriers whom the latter might appoint.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I bought a home in the country from a real estate agent who told me it was a two-story house with modern improvements. When I went to see it I discovered it didn't have any improvements and there was no second floor at all. What did the agent mean when he said it was a two-story house?

Truly yours,

IMA SAPP.

Answer: The agent was right in telling you it was a two-story house. As you say all the rooms were on the ground floor, that is one story, and there aren't any improvements in the house, that's the other story.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a working man, earning about $3,600 a year. My wife made me buy an automobile. I keep an account, and I find the car costs me $1,200 a year to run. What shall I do?

Sincerely,

X. TRAPARTS.

Answer: Stop keeping an account.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a man of forty years of age. I met a woman my own age at a party last week. I took her home and on the way I told her that her teeth were like "stars." I have called her up on the telephone but she won't talk to me. What do you think is wrong?

Truly yours,

HEYMAN SINGLE.

Answer: You probably hit the nail on the head. You said her teeth were just like "stars" and she thinks you said that because they come out every night.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I read in the papers today about a man who was crazy about golf. While he was playing a game with his wife she talked all the time, which interfered with his game. It seems his ball landed in a bunker and he had a very difficult shot. His wife kept talking to him. He could not stand it any longer. As she was in the bunker with him he turned and hit her with his driving iron. He was arrested and sent to jail for six months. Do you think that is right?

Yours truly,

IMA PUTTER.

Answer: It seems to me the reason he got six months was not because he hit his wife, but, he hit his wife in a "bunker" with a "driving iron." There's the whole story in a nutshell. He used the wrong club.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Can you give me an example that

Mother's Cook Book

A GOOD baked ham that is rich in color, juicy and tender, is a main dish which is extremely popular.

Baked Ham.

Soak the ham in cold water overnight. Pour off this water and cover with water to which has been added two cups of sugar and three-fourths of a cup of vinegar to a 12-pound ham. Simmer gently until well done, which will require 25 minutes to the pound, counting the time after the water simmers. Do not boil, as that toughens the meat. Let the ham cool in its own liquor. This adds to the moisture as well as flavor. When cold skin the ham, rub with brown sugar and dry mustard and stick with cloves. Put into a hot oven to brown nicely.

Apples Stuffed With Sausage.

This makes a nice luncheon dish. Wash six good-sized apples—the tart kind—scrape out the apple, leaving a thick wall, taking all the apple possible. Chop the apple, mix with sausage meat, refill the apples, then bake until they are well done. This is a nice winter breakfast dish.

Stuffed Pork Tenderloin.

Slit the tenderloin the entire length. Brush the meat with salt, pepper, and a cut clove of garlic. In the cavity place parboiled carrot and celery of equal amounts. Wrap up and skewer or tie. Place in a baking dish to roast with layers of sliced onions and apples. Baste during the roasting and serve the onions and apples around the meat.

Luncheon Croquettes.

Take one cup of chopped cooked beef, one cup of canned corn, one-half cup of bread crumbs, one beaten egg and a little cream, if more moisture is needed. Make into croquettes after seasoning well, roll in crumbs, in egg, then crumbs and fry in deep fat.

Cream cheese softened with cream to the consistency for spreading to which a dozen of chopped candied cherries are added, makes most luscious sandwich filling.

Answer: Sure I can. Say two girls are discussing matrimony, two sides to that subject would be as follows: One girl could say: "I do not intend getting married till I am thirty years old," and the other girl could say: "I do not intend being thirty years old till I get married."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am opening a clothing store and have been advised to take out some fire insurance. What I want to know is this: Say I had $5,000 worth of stock and say I took out $15,000 worth of insurance on Monday and had a fire on Tuesday, what would I get?

Yours truly,

POLLA C. HOLDER.

Answer: You'd get 10 years in jail.

Oldest Skyscraper Gets a New Roof

BUILT over a thousand years ago the Great House of the Casa Grande National reservation in Arizona has been given a new transite roof by the United States government. Made entirely out of mud, the "Great House" has stood up well but at last the ravages of sun and rain were beginning to tell. The Casa Grande was built by a race of Indians who have since completely vanished from the face of the earth.

SCIENTIFIC WONDER

Heat into sound is an amazing transformation accomplished by scientists. The warmth of a hand held near the device makes it emit a low growl; lighting a match a few feet away draws a snarl for an answer. The invention can be adjusted so that it is sensitive to a burning match 40 or 50 feet away.

Constipated?

The doctors say . . .

Use liquid treatment

Here is the soundest advice anyone can give on the subject of laxatives. It is based on medical opinion. We want you to have the benefit of this information no matter what laxative you may buy:

The secret of real relief from constipation is reduced dosage. You can't regulate the bowels unless you can regulate the help you give them. That is why doctors use a liquid laxative; the dose can be measured to a drop.

Avoid laxatives that you can't cut down in dosage; especially those that seem to require larger doses than when you began their use.

Under the doctor's care, you usually get a liquid laxative. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. Smaller and smaller doses—until you don't need any.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara—natural laxatives that form no habit.

TRUE GHOST STORIES

By Famous People

Copyright by Public Ledger, Inc.
WNU Service.By IRVING BERLIN
Famous Composer

ONLY the person who suffers from insomnia knows the ravages and terrors of the still night hours before the dawn of day.

Through the night lulling tunes and haunting melodies come to Irving Berlin, the famous composer; but sleep eludes him.

"Once during a hot summer night," Mr. Berlin related, "I was staying at a small Broadway hotel during the production of one of my first musical comedies.

"Tired out from the work of rehearsal, I could have fallen into a light sleep, but I was disturbed by the snoring of the man in the next room. I paced the floor. The snoring grew louder and weirder. It was uncanny. At four o'clock it stopped, and I fell asleep for a few minutes, only to be awakened again by the regularity of the harsh notes. I slept by fits and starts.

"At six o'clock I remember I was awake.

"Frantically, I walked into the hall. The snoring man's door was open. I pushed aside the ventilating screen. An empty white-rock bottle caught my eye. I picked it up and, with one blow, brought it down with revenge upon the man's head. It shattered into hundreds of pieces. Blood trickled down the man's face. This was horrible.

"The next thing I knew a hand was grasping my arm. I could feel it, but could not see it. Was it the dead man's ghost? I tried hard to visualize it—was it the hand of a spirit detective? I reached up to push the hand away.

"Wake up," roared a bellboy, who was tugging at my arm. "You left a call for seven o'clock. Hope you had a nice night's sleep," he added, jauntily. "The man in the next room has complained that he dreamed he heard the noise of some one walking back and forth, back and forth, all night. Hope you didn't hear anything queer."

By JOAN CRAWFORD
Motion Picture Actress

"SINCE childhood, I have been afraid of darkness. It is a fear which embodies nothing definite; but complete darkness terrifies me. Consequently, I always leave a dim light burning in the dressing room which opens from my bedroom," said Joan Crawford.

"A short time ago I had an amazing experience. One night at eleven o'clock this lamp flickered fitfully, almost going out completely and then burning again. I paid little attention to it, thinking something was wrong with the current. When the same thing happened the next night, at the same hours, eleven and twelve, I called in an electrician to test the wiring at the house, and of the lamp. Nothing wrong was found.

"On the third night we stayed home just to watch the lights. We turned them on all over the house, at eleven o'clock, but that in the dressing room behaved in the same peculiar fashion. I did not want to go out to dance or sing. On the fourth night, I moved from my room to one of the guest rooms, but because of my silly fear of the dark, which I know psychologists would say I should have overcome in my childhood, I left a light burning in the hall outside my room. At eleven o'clock that light began to flicker and a few minutes before twelve, it went out entirely. We were completely mystified.

"The next morning I received a wire from New York telling me that one of my oldest friends, a woman who had been very kind to me in the early days of my career, had died at midnight the night before.

"The telegram stated that four nights before my friend had been taken to the hospital for an emergency operation, that she had been operated on approximately at eleven o'clock, and that she had hovered between life and death during the period when I had trouble with my dressing room lamp.

"My lights went back to their usual steady behavior after that fourth night. I can't explain it. Perhaps there was something defective in the current—perhaps not."

The Mason and Dixie Line

The Mason and Dixie Line was the name given to the boundary between two American states, Maryland and Pennsylvania; the name was derived from the two English astronomers, Mason and Dixon, who surveyed the boundary in 1763.

This line formed part of the boundary between the states which continued to keep slaves and those which didn't. The result is that the phrase, "Mason and Dixie Line," is now widely used as meaning the whole of that boundary.—Answers Magazine.

Piano Invented in 1720

In its present form the piano was invented in 1720, but before it came the clavichord, the spinet, and the harpsichord. In all these the music was produced by quills which plucked the strings. It was not until the piano was designed that hammers were used to strike the strings.

ROOSEVELT ASKS
EXTENSION OF NRA

'Abandonment Is Unthinkable,' He Tells Congress.

Washington.—Two years more of the national recovery act, with clarification of policies, more effective enforcement of codes and the granting of "unquestioned power" to the federal government were urged by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a message to congress.

The President was enthusiastic in his defense of the NRA, which is scheduled to terminate June 16, calling it "the biggest factor in giving re-employment to approximately 4,000,000 people" and declaring that its abandonment would be "unthinkable."

His message said that the "fundamental purposes and principles" of the NRA must be maintained to establish at least a minimum fair trade practice and labor relation standards. "For example, child labor must not be allowed to return," he said; "the fixing of minimum wages and maximum hours is practical and necessary."

To calm the lately rising tide of New Deal opposition from organized labor, the President said that "the rights of employees freely to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining should be fully protected."

Mr. Roosevelt advocated more adequate application of the anti-trust laws, and severely condemned monopolies and private price fixing within industries. He said that the prevention of unfair competition should not be allowed to hinder fair competition, and that small enterprises should be given added protection against discrimination and oppression.

No more jail sentences for violators of the more than 700 NRA codes, if the President's suggestions are adopted. "In the development of this legislation, I call to your attention the obvious fact that the way to enforce laws, codes and regulations relating to industrial practices is not to seek to put people in jail," was his advice.

Defending the NRA as it exists, Mr. Roosevelt said: "Under it a great advance has been made. Only carping critics and those who seek political advantage or the right again to indulge in unfair practices or exploitation of labor or consumers deliberately seek to quarrel over the obvious fact that a great code of law, of order and of decent business cannot be created in a day or a year."

All details of the legislation necessary to extend the NRA were left by the President to congress. This was in keeping with the way the original NRA was presented to congress in May, 1933. No prepared bill was submitted when the original law was passed.

Less than an hour before the arrival of the President's message, the senate finance committee approved the Nye-McCarran resolution of the NRA and the administration of codes, with the amendment that the inquiry would have to be conducted during the framing of the recovery act legislation in congress. With the judiciary subcommittee unable to provide funds, committee members said they would try to proceed without money.

Washington, D. C.

Washington.—Although it has been several weeks since the Supreme court of the United States rendered its history-making decision in the gold cases, there is no slackening in the disturbance from the effects of the administration's gold policies, even in the light of the court ruling. While the court held that congress had no power to enact legislation invalidating the gold clause in government bonds, it said in the same breath that collection from the government by a bond holder was another story. Since the government has taken gold out of circulation, collection appears virtually impossible but the appearance is not going to stop bond holders from seeking what they regard as justice.

Call It
Reputation

It is now apparent that the government's action is going to be regarded both here and abroad as repudiation. That is a nasty word when applied to governments and its repercussions likely will be heard for a good many years.

While the repudiation of the gold payments will affect comparatively few people directly, the significance of the action in a political way is becoming more and more apparent. The repudiation in its effect on the bond holders may be only temporary, but its effect politically will be far-flung.

I think it is generally considered now that the gold question will become a paramount issue in the next political campaign and it is not impossible that it will continue to be an issue over a period of years. This is so because, admittedly, actual damage has been done to American prestige in foreign lands. It is made to appear, therefore, that there will be a combination of international and domestic influences at work henceforth with respect to this government's gold policies.

Domestically, the issue was born in the presentation in congress of two bills designed to restore, partially at least, the status of this government as regards the gold policies to that obtaining before the devaluation of the dollar. Simultaneously, former President Herbert Hoover, in one of the few expressions made since retiring from office, declared his belief that the return of gold payments was necessary and vital to stabilizing conditions and re-establishing the United States in world favor.

Of course, with the abundant Democratic majority in congress, the gold bills will get nowhere very fast. Likewise, Mr. Hoover's expression can and will result only in providing ammunition for New Deal supporters, whose answer to criticism usually is a question whether it is desired to return to the conditions that caused the depression.

Nevertheless, I hear considerable discussion to the effect that these ripples must be considered as only the beginning. They will have the effect of causing many people to think about the problem. Discussions will take place in the homes and in the shops. There will be those who contend for sound money of the old style. Equally vehement defenders of the New Deal will arise. Thus, the issue becomes joined and it is not outside the realm of possibility that monetary questions will become as important in 1936 as they were in the Bryan free silver days.

Now as to the practical operation of the gold rulings:

Operation of Gold Rulings

There can be no doubt that the Constitution gives congress power to coin money and regulate its value. The Supreme court always has sustained this power. So, when congress, by resolution, allowed President Roosevelt to seize all of the gold in this country and hold it in the treasury, it accomplished indirectly that which it could not do directly. In this way it forced the invalidation of thousands of private contracts wherein one party promised to make payments in gold. Congress made such payments impossible and those who were to be paid have nothing left but disillusionment. As to the gold payment clause in the government bonds the Supreme court said that congress had no right to enact legislation the effect of which was to void that payment. It would seem, therefore, that some way should be found to force the government to make good. That way lies only through the Court of Claims of the United States, and when that court is denied jurisdiction in suits to recover, the bond holder is left with a right, but that right is unenforceable since the government can be sued only with its permission.

On top of these circumstances, and as a long range proposition, considerable attention has been directed to the relationship between the gold clause decisions and inflation. There is a direct link. This link, without doubt, should be watched by all of those who think of the future of this nation.

Inflation of the credit has been going on continuously since Mr. Roosevelt took office. The federal government has set no limit to the borrowing which it will undertake in its program for recovery. The Supreme court has said directly that government securities are worth whatever the administration and congress determine them to be worth because the dollar can be valued up or down as circumstances warrant.

But the value which the President and congress place upon the dollar may differ materially from the value which the public places upon the currency. The public will view the dollar in terms of its purchasing power. Public confidence in the currency, therefore, becomes an absolute necessity and once it is shaken, if history means anything, it takes a long hard pull to get it back. So, if congress shows a willingness to repudiate obligations as it has shown already, the public sooner or later begins to wonder what the end will be.

Throughout history, wherever and whenever such a condition has arisen, the public seeks to convert this doubtful currency into material things, those of a utilitarian value, which it may use. Money, being inedible, is sought to be exchanged for things to eat, to wear, to sustain life and comfort. This is what is meant in expressions "the flight from the dollars," or "the flight" from any other currency about which we have heard so much since the World war.

The situation in congress in the last few weeks has provided a test for President Roosevelt's political acumen. It has been far more a test of his skill than otherwise would have been the case because for almost two years he has had a congress so obedient to his command as to merit the description of a rubber stamp legislative body. Now, however, the President is faced with the necessity for political maneuvers of the highest order and upon the results of his tactics much will depend. He can cement the links of the Democratic party or he can cause them to disintegrate by the courses he follows.

Up to the President

Some curiosity has been aroused by the fact that for the first time since he became President, Mr. Roosevelt omitted in several instances lately to send administration drafts of bills for congressional consideration. His practice hitherto had been to have the bills drafted in executive departments and submitted with a recommendation that they be enacted in that form. Until some of the factions in congress began to feel their oats this plan worked very well. A change has come over some of them, however, and they are now insisting upon preparation of the legislation themselves.

Another significant development—and this links to circumstances of several months ago—was the presentation by Senator Wagner of New York of a bill to settle labor disputes. This bill does not have administration approval. Indeed, it is quite contrary in some of its phases to the policies which Mr. Roosevelt has sponsored in his dealings with organized labor. It seems important, therefore, that Senator Wagner, who for so long was regarded as Mr. Roosevelt's alter ego in the senate, should deliberately offer legislation to which the administration had not agreed. With further reference to Senator Wagner, who comes from the President's home state of New York, it is interesting, even if unimportant, that Senator Wagner did not support the President in the latter's efforts to force the $5,000,000,000 work relief bill through the senate. Since Senator Wagner has been consistently a New Dealer many observers are asking with some logic whether the New Deal supporters have begun to crack up.

It will be recalled that in asking for an extension of the national industrial recovery act for a period of two years, President Roosevelt merely outlined in his message the fundamentals of the plan he was recommending. He carefully avoided reference to any draft of such a bill. It occasioned some surprise that this was so but closer analysis of the situation should have developed reasons therefor. Most of these reasons are traceable directly to the circumstances I mentioned above, namely, the necessity for tactical skill in maneuvering, the political strength available to the President.

Observers here generally are agreed that Mr. Roosevelt can turn on full steam and hold a powerful majority in both house and senate. But, the question is whether this is the wiser course from a political standpoint. In this connection the expression has been heard several times lately among Democrats who have been regarded as among the leaders that it might not be well to prod stubborn mules too far.

The best information I can gather is that while Mr. Roosevelt did not offer a draft of NRA extension legislation, a bill will be forthcoming in a couple of weeks from the senate finance committee that will have had prior approval from the White House. Something of the same course is scheduled for the house side. Thus, the picture becomes complete. The fine Italian hand of the administration comes into view.

The story we get around Washington is that this course of action will be used more and more as a means of avoiding open disputes and stubbornness on the floors of the house and senate.

Lesson for March 10

PETER PREACHES TO GENTILES

LESSON TEXT—Acts 10:1-11:18.
GOLDEN TEXT—Of a truth I perceive God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. Acts 10:34, 35.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Peter Learns That God Loves Everybody.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Learns Something New.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Gospel for All.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Overcoming Racial and National Prejudices.

The missionary program of the church having broadened to include the Samaritans in Philip's preaching in Samaria, we see in this lesson the program still widening and embracing the Gentiles. Through the conversion of Cornelius, the middle wall of partition was broken down (Eph. 2:14).

I. The Man Cornelius (10:1, 2).

1. His official position (v. 1). He was a centurion, a Roman officer over a company of one hundred soldiers.
2. His character (v. 2). a. "A devout man." b. A benevolent man. c. A praying man. d. Highly respected by his family.

The Lord chose Cornelius as the channel of the transition of the gospel to the Gentiles because of his character and position.

II. Supernatural Preparation for the Transition of the Gospel to the Gentiles (10:3-35).

In order to bring this about, observe:

1. Two visions were given.

a. The vision of Cornelius (vv. 3-8). While engaged in prayer, an angel of God instructed him to send to Joppa for Peter, who would tell him what to do. Cornelius sent at once for Peter.

b. The vision of Peter (vv. 9-16). While Peter was praying (v. 9) he saw a certain vessel containing clean and unclean animals let down from heaven, and heard the command, "Rise, Peter; kill, and eat." Peter protested that he had never eaten any unclean thing. God replied, "What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common." This vessel, let down and taken back, indicated that both Jews and Gentiles were accepted on high.

2. A messenger sent from Cornelius (vv. 17-22). Peter was greatly perplexed over what he had seen, but not for long, for a messenger from Cornelius made inquiry at the gate for him. The Spirit informed Peter of the matter and bade him go, nothing doubting.

3. The meeting of Cornelius and Peter (vv. 23-33).

a. Peter took six witnesses along (v. 23 cf. 11:12). In a matter of so great importance he must have witnesses.

b. Cornelius waiting for Peter (v. 24) called together his kinsmen and near friends.

c. Cornelius, about to worship Peter (vv. 25, 26), was told by Peter that he himself was but a man.

d. The reciprocal explanation (vv. 27-33). Peter explained how God had taken from him his Jewish prejudices. Cornelius explained how God had instructed him to send for Peter.

III. Peter's Sermon (vv. 34-43).

1. The introduction (vv. 34, 35) showed that God is no respecter of persons (see Golden Text).

2. His discourse (vv. 36-43) touches briefly upon the mission of Jesus, showing that he was qualified for his work as a Mediator. He then exhibited the work of Christ.

a. In his life (vv. 36-39). He went about doing good, even casting out demons, as a proof of the fact that God was with him (v. 38).

b. In his death (v. 39). The just suffered for the unjust that he might bring us to God (1 Pet. 3:18).

c. In his resurrection (vv. 40, 41). God raised him up the third day, showing openly that Christ was his Son (Rom. 1:4) and that his sacrificial work was satisfactory (Rom. 4:25). In this discourse Peter sets forth:

(1) The basis of salvation—the sacrificial death of Christ (vv. 39, 40) (2) The scope of salvation—"whosoever" (v. 43). (3) The method appropriating salvation—"believe on him" (v. 43).

IV. The New Pentecost (vv. 44-48).

As the gospel was entering upon its widest embrace the Holy Spirit came in new power.

V. Peter Vindicates His Ministry to the Gentiles (11:1-18).

Being called to account for visiting and eating with Gentiles Peter's defense took the form of logical argument, showing how God had set his seal on the work by the miraculous gift of the Spirit.

Religion of Love

Self-confidence is good, and one can do very little without it, but it is something that needs watching, in order that its tendrils do not overgrow 'the vital'; and one of the things in life which are vital is love, and from love springs happiness.

As a Little Child

"When Israel was a child, then I loved him," (Hosea 11:1). Aim to be ever this little child, contented with what the Father gives of pleasure or of play.

NEW SPECIES OF ERMINE

What is declared to be a new species of ermine, one of the most valuable animals in the world, has been discovered in the Komy region of Russia in the neighborhood of the Ural mountains. The animals were found by an expert on fur-bearing animals. The fur and hide of the new species has been tested, and are stated to be superior in quality to most of the ermine now on sale.

A $1.50 Dinner for 6

THERE are lots of things you can do for a dollar and a half, but it is doubtful whether you can please six people better, all at once, than by serving them this dinner at a cost of a quarter each.

Baked Chicken Maryland 88¢
Oven-Baked French Fried Potatoes 6¢
Currant Jelly 9¢
Bread and Butter 12¢
Peach and Banana Salad 30¢
Demi-Tasse 5¢

The ingredients of the first dish are as follows:

1 3-pound chicken
1 large egg
Bread or cracker crumbs
1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup water
3 tbsps. butter
3 tbsps. flour
1 13-ounce can chicken broth without rice
1/4 cup evaporated milk
Salt and pepper

Cut up chicken, dust with flour and salt, and dip each piece first in beaten egg, then in crumbs. Place in a well-greased flat pan (some people like to use two glass pie plates) so the pieces are only one layer deep. Place in a hot oven—400 degrees—having the pan covered for the first fifteen minutes. Baste occasionally with the quarter cup of butter melted in the third of a cup water. Bake from forty-five minutes to an hour, or until tender. Meanwhile make a rich sauce by melting the three tablespoons butter, adding the three tablespoons flour and stirring smooth. Add the chicken broth slowly, stirring until creamy. Add the evaporated milk, and season with salt and pepper. Pour over chicken when done.

The ingredients of the salad are:
6 canned peach halves
2 bananas
6 lettuce leaves
1/2 cup mayonnaise

Arrange crisp lettuce leaves on salad plates. In the center of each place a mound of sliced banana. Cover with an inverted peach half, and dress with mayonnaise.*

Startling Figures Show Reasons For Bad School Conditions

Startling figures indicating some of the reasons for the deplorable conditions in the schools of Illinois are revealed in a comparative study of the state's revenues and its school expenditures. By checking the reports of the state auditor and treasurer and the statistical reports of the superintendent of public instruction, for comparative years, it is shown that:

Total expenditures, all funds, for the schools for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, were $149,994,741.20; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, $100,706,112.88. (These latter figures are subject to some minor corrections but are, approximately correct.) The point is that in five years the expenditures for schools in Illinois have dropped 32.9 per cent!

Now, the other side of the picture. Total revenues for Illinois, all funds, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, (auditor's report) were $105,433,663.69 as against $211,617,911.63 for the calendar year (treasurer's report) ending December 31, 1934. These show that while the expenditures for schools dropped almost one-third the revenues for the state climbed 100.7 per cent!

Digging deeper into the picture the cold figures show that the state has consistently met its obligations except those to the school fund. There is now due the school fund from the state, overdue and in default might be a better way of putting it, a total of $15,419,393.90.

One major item in default to the common school fund is $7,000,000 which the legislature appropriated and which was to have been paid out of sales tax receipts but which cannot be paid until a special emergency bill is passed.

Do the teachers get the money? No, not always. Hundreds of teachers hold warrants which, to get any money at all, they must discount up to 20 and 40 per cent of their face value. Other hundreds have taken their pay in "orders." Some warrants and many orders cannot be cashed or sold at all.

In numerous school districts the teachers have received no cash money in months or even years. Because they theoretically have jobs, pay being promised though they do not get it, they cannot get help from emergency relief. In scores of instances, school boards hesitantly report, teachers would be in better financial condition if they abandoned their schools and went on relief.

The teachers remain harnessed to their tasks, victims of red tape, because they cling to a vague hope that sometime, in their declining years, they may have meagre old age pensions; or, because they hesitate to lose priority of tenure; or, perhaps, because of loyalty to their youthful charges.

Because school maintenance has been cut almost in half buildings are not only sinking into decay but hundreds of painters, carpenters, and other workers, artisans, and laborers have less work and smaller incomes.

Because development of new grounds and buildings has dropped more than $20,000,000 a year another army of carpenters, brick masons, painters, plumbers and workers in the supply trades are idle and on relief.

Because instruction costs, and the big item is teachers' salaries, has been cut $18,600,000 a year with a large part of what is left uncollectable, the buying power of the teachers of the state has been cut, it is estimated, almost one-third.

Friends of the school system in Illinois, growing militant, are asking members of the legislature:

"Isn't it better business to keep the painter, the carpenter, the mason and the laborer busy maintaining or constructing school buildings than to support him on relief? Isn't it better to put the money into permanence than sink it in a hole?"

Isn't it better to pay the teachers' salaries to instruct youth than to shorten the school year or close the schools entirely? Some schools, recently closed, have reopened only because parents "chipped in" with donations necessary to carry on."

There are approximately 1,500,000 children of school age in Illinois. Many schools, especially in the poorer rural sections, are cutting from one to two months, or more, from the school year. New York state insures against such breakdowns with a fund of $110,000,000 for state support of schools. Illinois has a similar state fund of only $10,500,000 of which $7,000,000 is now delinquent.

Electricity Used When Engine Fails

The Diesel engine which pumps city water, lights the streets and furnishes electricity for municipal purposes in Kewanee, Illinois, was placed back in service last week after a two weeks' shutdown due to an explosion. Experts from the Beloit plant of the Fairbanks Morse Company, manufacturers of the engine, assisted city workmen in repairing the damage which occurred February 1st when a cylinder blew up damaging the fly wheel, engine base and crank shaft. No one was injured when the engine, which was installed about a year ago, was wrecked.

Water and lighting service was maintained during the period of shutdown through the prompt action of city officials who arranged for an emergency connection with the lines of the Kewanee Public Service Company. The engine received considerable publicity two weeks prior to the explosion when city fathers invited representatives from other municipalities in northern Illinois to attend a two day meeting held to celebrate the first anniversary of its operation.

THE PATMAN BILL

The campaign for immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates being waged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. took a new turn in recent weeks when the situation in Washington made it necessary for this organization to name its choice between the Patman bill and the Vinson measure. Persistent requests, from members of Congress, for a specific recommendation from the V.F.W., displayed a definite desire to be guided by the wishes of America's overseas veterans.

The 1934 National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States merely expressed a demand for immediate cash payment, without compromise. When recent developments made endorsement of one particular bill necessary, leaders of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States decided that a poll of Department Commanders offered the only prompt method of gauging the sentiment of the organization at large. When given their choice between the alternatives of remaining neutral, the Patman plan or the Vinson bill, forty-eight state Commanders voted unanimously to "stand pat with Patman."

Prior to 1934, previous National Encampments of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States gave unanimous approval to the Patman proposal. This bill provides for immediate settlement of this debt through the issuance of currency against existing legal gold reserves. It will reduce the national debt and simultaneously administer much needed relief throughout the country, without placing an additional burden upon the taxpayer.

In contrast to the Patman plan, the Vinson bill simply stipulates that this debt shall be paid with funds from the federal treasury. Such funds can only be raised through the issuance of bonds or an addition at tax levy. Either plan will increase the national debt. Either plan will boost taxes, while the issuance of bonds would also create a rake-off for bankers in the form of interest charges. Furthermore, the issuance of such bonds would also let loose a new flood of tax-exempt securities for those who wish to escape taxation of their wealth.

Unquestionably, H.R. 1—the Patman bill—offers the most logical solution to the so-called bonus problem. It not only recognizes the demand for immediate cash payment of this debt to the veteran, but it also gives equal consideration to the economic welfare of the nation itself.

The Telephone Locates the Best Prices!

All the months of care spent upon a farmer's livestock may be sacrificed by unprofitable marketing. Such a risk may often be avoided by using the telephone. The telephone is a proved and profitable link between farm and market. To follow market trends and locate good prices by telephone is simple and inexpensive. Both the sale itself and the shipping arrangements may be made over the wire. The extra profit that results often pays the small cost of the telephone for many months to come. And when sudden illness, fire or any emergency comes, then telephone service is priceless. Yet, the cost is so moderate you not only can afford a telephone—you can't afford to be without one.

More Taxes Cry From Springfield

The stage was set last week for probably the most intensive effort to raise revenue for the state that will be witnessed for some time. After a number of meetings of the executive committees of both houses with the Governor and other state officials, the possibility of a united plan for raising revenue by taxation to meet the demands of the federal government was abandoned. When the House met at four o'clock on Wednesday afternoon (the late session being called because of the conference) it was asked by Mr. F. W. Lewis, Chairman of the Executive Committee that he be allowed to introduce some bills at the close of the session because they were then in preparation by the Legislative Reference Bureau.

Rumors had prepared the way for the bills which provide

- (1) An increase in the gas tax from 3 to 4 cents per gallon until July 1, 1937, after which it returns to its present level.
- (2) An increase in the occupational tax from 2 per cent to 3 per cent until July 1, 1937, after which it returns to its present level.
- (3) A broadening of the base of the Occupational tax to include over 100 occupations and professions, including lawyers, doctors, dentists, engineers, insurance agents, etc. Persons engaged in these occupations and professions would be assessed 3 per cent of their gross receipts without regard to expenses and costs of doing business. This bill does not provide for a return to 2 per cent tax after July 1, 1937.
- (4) A tax of 3 per cent of the gross receipts of water, gas and electric companies, both municipal and private, until July 1, 1937, after which the tax is reduced to 2 per cent.

All of the bills were advanced to second reading without reference to a committee.

On Thursday morning Mr. Adamowski, the Democratic floor leader of the House, moved that on Wednesday morning, March 6, at 11 o'clock the bills be taken up before the House as a Committee of the whole.

It is safe to predict that there will be a great deal of discussion on these measures as increases in taxes are not a popular subject with the citizens whom the members of the Assembly represent.

Every legislator knows that funds for relief must be provided, but there is a feeling among a large number in the Assembly that relief costs must be cut and that the plans of the federal government should be carefully considered before action is taken.

It was a disappointment to those interested in schools that educational needs were not given consideration in the conference.

All over the state great interest has been shown by the Parent Teachers Associations and other educational groups in the House Bills No. 80 and No. 81. These bills had received recommendation for passage from the Education Committee. This week they were referred to the Appropriations Committee. Thus efforts to help the schools receive delinquent payments from the State School Distributive Fund were thwarted.

More than 600 Bills on every type of subject have been introduced into the Assembly. Bills on Taxation, Motor Vehicles, Liquor and Elections predominate.

LIVING IN THE CONGO JUNGLE

I am a little jungle boy. I live in a house which looks like a haystack. The floors are made of clay and we build our fire in the middle of it. There are many animals down here. One day my brother and I caught the biggest Lion there was in the jungle. There was no one with us so my brother and I celebrated around him. Then we pulled him home by his tail. When we got home we feasted. We never use forks so we ate with our fingers! After we had finished my brother and I had to climb a tree for some dates so we had a fight. Then Ki Ki came along and climbed it for us. We keep our food in a basket set on high poles. The next day an elephant came and knocked the pole down and ate all our food. Then one of the biggest aeroplanes came over and we were afraid. I just learned to write or you would never get this story.

Mrs. Lester N. Stoltenberg,
Publicity Chairman

Manufacture of the little red poppies which the American Legion Auxiliary will distribute on Poppy Day, May 25th will begin this month in many veterans hospitals and work-rooms throughout the country. Mrs. E. Wannemacher, poppy chairman of the Tinley Park Unit of the Auxiliary has announced. The work will give an opportunity to earn money and beneficial occupation to hundreds of disabled World War veterans.

The poppy making will continue thru the winter and spring months and more than ten million of the paper replicas of the famous Flanders Fields poppy are expected to be made before Poppy Day. Employment is given only to veterans receiving little or no government compensation and men with dependent families are given preference. The number of poppies each worker is permitted to make per day is restricted to 300 or less to spread the employment among the largest possible number and to prevent the disabled men from overtaxing their strength. At the average rate of one cent per flower, the earnings of the disabled men will total approximately $100,000.

On May 25th, the Saturday before Memorial Day, volunteer workers from the Auxiliary will distribute the flowers on the streets of Tinley Park to be worn in memory of the war dead. Contributions received in exchange for the poppies will be used in the relief and welfare work of the American Legion and Auxiliary.

FRUITS IN CANS

PART of the joy of eating fruit comes from the lovely surroundings in which you find it. What a good time Adam and Eve must have had in the Garden of Eden eating the first apple! Even after they were evicted by the Angel with the flaming sword it must have been an exceedingly agreeable memory! At any rate, their descendants have gone right on eating apples.

We're all out of the Garden of Eden now. We don't even know where it is. And unfortunately, most of us can't pluck and eat our fruits in either gardens or orchards. Someone else does the plucking in the sunshine and sweet surroundings, and the best he can do for us is to see that the fruit reaches us in our homes with as much of its original taste and aroma as possible.

A Swell Job

The commercial canning industry does a swell job for us in this respect. Who of us hasn't mentally glimpsed a branch of apple or peach blossoms when opening a superlative can of one of those fruits? Who hasn't sensed the warmth and romance of far-off Hawaii when the lid comes off a can of pineapple? Who hasn't... But all this is apt to make us homesick for leaves and sunshine and outdoors. Let's eat some of the fruit and see how it tastes. But, first of all, let's consider what fruits are available in cans. The list is long. There are apples—apple butter, sauce, sliced whole—apricot halves, blackberries, blueberries, and cherries —black, red and white. There are coconuts, cranberry jelly, figs from the Orient and Texas, mixed fruits for cocktails and salads, and also gooseberries and grapes. Then there are grapefruit, loganberries, peaches—in halves and sliced—pear halves, pineapple—crushed, sliced and in tidbits—plums, prunes—dry and in syrup—raspberries black and raspberries red. Finally there are rhubarb, strained fruits, strawberries and fruits put up in wine for salad. If we got them all, we would almost have a regular Garden of Eden from cans.

Take Your Choice

At any rate, we can choose the ones we like best of all these at any time in almost any place. Why not break with habit and try a few new ones that it hasn't occurred to you to eat before? Take cherries, for instance, which come to mind because Washington's Birthday occurs in February. Here's an excellent cherry recipe for cream tarts which will make a sure-fire hit with your family. The ingredients are:

2 eggs
1/2 cup sugar
1/3 cup flour
A few grains salt
2 cups milk

Beat the eggs slightly, then add the sugar, flour and salt mixed together. Add the scalded milk slowly, and cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly, until thick and smooth. Add the vanilla, and cool. Add the two-thirds cup sugar to the cherry syrup from the can, bring to boiling, add the cherries, and cook gently until the syrup is rich and thick. Cool. Fill tart shells half full of the cream mixture, and cover thickly with the glazed cherries. This makes eight tarts.

Try These Desserts

Or combine two of these fruits in a dessert which is delicious such as the following Pineapple-Rhubarb Ice. The ingredients are:

1 package lemon gelatin
1 cup boiling water
2 cups water

1 1/2 cups sugar
1 cup crushed pineapple
4 cups rhubarb
1 cup water

Dissolve the gelatin in the boiling water. Boil the two cups of water and sugar for two or three minutes, and add to the gelatin. Cool and add the pineapple. The rhubarb should be cut in small pieces and then cooked till very soft in the one cup of water. Press through a sieve, and add to the first mixture. (There should be two cups of rhubarb juice.) Freeze in refrigerator trays, stirring often at first, then occasionally. Serves twelve.

A simpler dessert for children is Peach Junket. Its ingredients are:

1 package lemon junket
One 1-pound can sliced peaches

Heat the milk to lukewarm and dissolve it in the junket. Do not stir after dissolving. Drain the peaches well and lay half of them in the bottoms of individual glass cups. Pour the junket over, and set in refrigerator to chill and set, being careful not to agitate it, or it will whey. When ready to serve, lay the remaining peaches on top. Serves six.*

SCHOOL NEWS

The aim of the editors of this column is:

To inform those interested, in the activities of this school.

To be a record of the creative abilities of the students.

The Primary room is decorated to look like scenes from Holland with brightly colored tulips, windmills, Dutch people, and carts.

The pupils in the Second grade have organized a reading club. Violet Hurley and Lois Manche are captains.

The pupils in the Sixth grade had a Spelling match, Monday afternoon. The four pupils who spelled all the words correctly were Edwin Wachter, Marie Rinke, Pearl Werner, and "Buddy" Warner.

The Intermediate room is attractively decorated to represent scenes from Holland.

The pupils in the Freshman English class have just finished their study of "The Lady of the Lake", by Sir Walter Scott.

Each pupil made a notebook as a special project. The note books were composed of quotations from "The Lady of the Lake" illustrated with the proper pictures and enclosed in beautifully decorated covers. Bernice Hostert's was chosen as the best with Victor Demkov, Warren Mancke, and Wilbert Lauffer receiving honorable mention.

Monday "The Lady of the Lake" unit was interestingly concluded with a debate on the following: Resolved, "Roderick Dhu met his just fate". The affirmative side's leading debaters were Wilbert Lauffer and Russell Nelson with Ada Semmler giving her support. The negative sides leading debator was Bernice Hostert with Victor Demkov, Howard Jungels, Arnold Bertelson, and Howard Strassenburg giving ample assistance. With Miss Vail and the pupils of the sophomore class as the judges the decision was given in favor of the negative side.

Poet World

This is a world for poets. too
No matter what they say
A world for sympathizers
On every kind of day.

A world that has the troubles
Of every one to bear
A world that should take notice
To every kindness share.

A world that owns a loving hand
For any kind of man
A world where people always try,
To do the best they can.

It is a world where everyone
Though homely, rich or poor
Should coax the people to be fair
And never try to lure.

It is a world where poets
Are all allowed to write
The good and bad of every life
Without an awful fight.

SCHOOL SMELL

Tracing reluctant steps to school one fine morning, I, with the eagerness of my youth, breathed in the cool fresh air which I heartily proclaimed had the promising tinge of spring. Spring! An interlude of anticipation. Such poetic thoughts surged through my brain until I opened the school door of which I, by now, romantically deemed a Greek portal. With a backward swing of the door my dreams stopped, the pungent school smell met me. Romance fled. Realism was upon me. Now for ten years it has met me. I have sought to analyze it. It is a mixed odor of chalk dust, oil from the doors, and books. But then that explanation isn't entirely satisfactory. Perhaps it is the undefinable smell of an institution which fairly reeks of education.

A very fine play "The Poor Rich", was presented by the Sophomore class of the Mokena High School, under the able direction of Miss Maxine Vail.

The success was due, we believe, in the first place to the play itself. A brief resume of the characters is as follows:

Virginia Brown with her usual vivacity kept the audience pleasantly jolly with her "hightoned" antics. Dorothy Homering played very understandingly the patient, tolerant Louise.

Certainly Edna Lorenz's praises have already reached your ear. As Lucinda, Edna surpassed all her previous performances in school activities.

Katheryn Erickson, always so shy, surprised us with her ardent admiration of "Ole".

Grace Moriarty appeared lovely in her finished portrayal of the much discussed Lila.

Harold Balaz most gracefully fulfilled our expectation as "papa", perfectly turned with humor and pathos.

Robert Nieman surprised us as Clark Gable in overalls.

Elsworth McGovney with his usual saucy portrayed the character of the envied young man in the case. Maxwell Williams very graciously took the name of "Jake" and lived up to its ideals.

William Devlin's ability to do character part is acknowledged, for as "Ole" he was insuperable.

Also we feel the success was due to Miss Vail's kindness in suggesting our characterizations. The production gave us pleasure as well as instruction in play craft. We thank her.

Miss Vail, Mr. Dunn, and the Sophomore class wish to express their thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Ona E. McGovney, Mrs. Rose Moriarty, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Brown, Mrs. Dunn, Miss Doig, Miss Frances Sorenson and Miss Krusemark for the use of their furnishings and decorations used for the class play last Thursday night.

GREATER DIRECT CHILD
RELIEF IS 1935 OBJECTIVE"A SQUARE DEAL
FOR EVERY CHILD"

A PLAN OF ACTION

There is no part of the Legion's program that is more deserving of public recognition than its work in child welfare. The Legion's program is not a mere doctrine of words; it is a plan of action. In every city, town and hamlet of America, members of the Legion and of the Auxiliary are bending their efforts toward improving and fostering adequate laws for the protection of America's younger generation. They are working to outlaw child labor by federal mandate, to build up in the states and municipalities proper safeguards against the exploitation of childhood in any form, and to have legislation enacted to protect the home.

But the Legion's interests and activities in this field do not end there. The Legion has assumed the responsibility of making sure that the orphans and needy children of veterans have every opportunity in life that can be obtained for them. If the father has passed on, the Legion strives to the fullest extent of its ability to take the place of that father in protecting his orphans when the need arises. And if the father, through illness or the misfortunes of life, is unable to provide his children with proper food, clothing and shelter, the Legion is there to extend a helping hand.

While the direct relief provisions of the child welfare program are limited to needy children of World War veterans, all children of the nation are benefited through the educational and legislative objectives which the Legion sets in its program. The Legion's slogan is "A Square Deal for Every Child." That is why the Legion is enlisting public attention and awakening public conscience to the child welfare needs; furnishing practical information about child welfare conditions to the general public; influencing all localities to assume their responsibility for child care and protection and securing legislation against child desertion and family abandonment.

An intoxicated man had just been firmly but quietly ushered out of a refreshment wigwam. He wobbled uncertainly across the street to the edge of a small lake. Swaying back and forth, he looked intently down into the water, until an officer came up and demanded to know what he was doing.

"Jush lookin' a' shumpin' in 'e lake, osshifer, 'ats all," he replied.

"Well, just what are you looking at?"

"I dunno; what is't, osshifer? Pleash tell me."

The officer looked at the lake and said: "It's the moon, you fool!"

For a while the stricken one was silent in perplexed and serious meditation. Finally he said:

"Thash funny. If tha's moon down there, what'n th' hellam I doin' up here?"

Comrad George Six, of Cincinnati, hands in one about an old man who kept a second-hand clothing store. He could not write, and marked his price tags by making pencil dots on them, each dot representing one dollar. One day he attached a tag to a suit of clothes and put three dots on the tag. While he was out of the store the next day his clerk sold the suit. When he came back he missed the suit from the rack and asked:

"Bennie, where is dot zoot of clothes?"

"I sold it, sir."

"Good boy, and for it he replied, did you get?"

"Nine dollars."

"Nine dollars! Dot is impossible!" exclaimed the merchant. "Kvick, lemme see dot tag mit der price!"

The clerk found the tag and handed it to the old man, who gazed at it for several moments, and then raising his eyes upward, exclaimed: "Gott bless dot leetle fly!"

Large Host Pays Final Tribute To Dr. C. Scheer

A very large number of freinds and neighbors gathered at the Tinley Park M. E. church Sunday afternoon to pay their last tributes of honor to Dr. C. Scheer, well beloved fellow townsman who died so suddenly of a heart attack in his home last Thursday afternoon. The Rev. Chas. H. Hedler, pastor of the Tinley Park M. E. church officiated and the following obituary, which is given herewith in full:

Dr. Conrad Scheer, son of William Scheer and his wife Marie (nee) Harmening, was born Jan. 12, 1866 in Frankfort township, Will Co., Ill. His parents were splendid Christian people, a testimony which I have from his own lips, members of the Mokena Church of the Evan. Synod of North America and he was the third eldest of a family of ten children. In this Christian home he grew up to young manhood as a dutiful son and kind brother and undoubtedly his relation to the other children as an older brother had much to do, under the training of his parents, to develop and fix the inherent qualities of his splendid character.

He attended the country school of his home district and graduated from it in his early teens and was confirmed in his home church by his pastor, the Rev. C. Schaub who also baptized him.

When about 15 years old something occurred in his life which undoubtedly influenced the choice of his life's work and at the same time implanted the cause of his sudden and only too early death. A fire had broken out in the barn of his uncle about a mile away and after having run as fast as he could to get to the conflagration he climbed with panting breath to the roof of an adjoining building and poured many pails of water on it as they were passed to him by others below. Young and strong as he was this nearly cost him his life, for he had over exerted his heart so badly, that his physician gave him only a few months to live and to he asserted that he would "fool that doctor", and by his indomitable will and courage did so, he had permanently injured this vital organ of his body.

Not being able to continue with the hard physical labor which is always required on the farm, he grasped an opportunity to work as an attendant in the Kankakee Insane Asylum, where he had charge of about 80 patients.

As this work gave him a great deal of diversion and entailed no hard labor, he gradually took a new lease on life and laid plans for his professional career. After attending High School he entered the Chicago Dental College which was affiliated with the Northwestern University and after completing the prescribed course he began the practice of dentistry. After having practiced his profession several years in Chicago, while also maintaining an office in Tinley Park, his practice grew to such proportions out here, that he felt it to be the best policy to confine his work to Tinley Park and the surrounding country. Here he has been the people's dentist for the past 45 years. He was widely known not only for his splendid professional work, but also for his sunny and kind disposition, for even his Chicago patients came out here to patronize him.

On July 11, 1894 he married Miss Sadie C. Ruggles and together they lived a happy life for more than 40 years, making Tinley Park their permanent home.

There is perhaps no better standard by which to judge a man's heart and character than the attitude he takes toward his wife, whom he has promised to love and cherish until "death do them part", and judged by this standard our deceased brother and friend was a truly wonderful man.

His wife was the ideal of his heart and the object of his tenderest love and care thruout these years of his married life. That is the testimony of his entire relationship and his many friends who knew them intimately. He proved this not only in the days of sunshine and of health, when all things went well, but also in the dark days of adversity and affliction. Four years ago Mrs. Scheer was stricken with paralysis and while his two sisters-in-law, Mrs. V. H. Scheer and Mrs. Jennie Ruggles gave him their unstinted help, yet the greatest part of the work of caring for her devolved upon him. And tho his own strength was often taxed, his work never became a burden to him. With the tenderest care and a holy devotion to her every comfort he ministered unto her, both physically and spiritually, set upon keeping her as long as he could, for without her he felt his home would be no more and he would stand alone bereft of her, whom he loved most, the companion of his life.

None of us really know the burden he carried, for he never murmured nor repined. He never spoke of his own dangerous physical affliction, nor of the work he had in taking care of his wife, and when any of his friends ever dared to express any sympathy with him, he smiled and proudly said "I would not trade places with any man!"

And as he opened his heart to his wife, he opened it also to her parents. When he built his home he arranged it so that they could live with him and their daughter and together they took care of these old people for more than 10 years.

Nor was he less loving and kind to his other relatives. In all of their afflictions he stood by them; they called him their "Gibraltar" and their children fondly called him "uncle Doc". Nor can we fail to mention his sterling character and qualities as a Christian gentleman. Having married a young lady belonging to the M. E. church he graciously consented to join her church and worship with her. They together were a wonderful asset to this little congregation, giving liberally and gladly both of their money and their personal services. Never shall what they did be forgotten. For many years Mrs. Scheer was Superintendent and church organist and it was not beneath his dignity to serve as janitor for a period of 20 years without other compensation than the joy and satisfaction of serving in the Lord's work.

In conversing with him it was very evident that he was a true Christian a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, trusting in the merits of His death, and resurrection and endeavoring to follow in the footsteps of his Master, who was the unseen and constant guest in his home.

Into His keeping and care he placed his own and his wife's life, as every night when he put her to bed, they would together lift their hearts to Him in prayer and every new morning that dawned upon him he greeted with rejoicing ready with God's help to take up its labors and cares.

A man of sterling Christian character, moral, honest, industrious and of indomitable will, a loving husband, a kind brother, a good friend and citizen, he lived amongst us. Today as we look back upon his life we pass this judgment upon him: "He was a good man, by whose presence the world was made better and whose good influence shall abide with all who knew him."

But we are not as those without hope, for we look forward to a happy reunion in the blessed beyond, where parting is no more, in the name of Jesus Christ who is the resurrection and the life.

Better Breakfasts

YES. There is a way to make that first breakfast dish of fruit different, and, oh, the difference it makes! The exclamation: "But this is something new!" is balm to the soul of the solicitous housewife who has to plan three hundred and sixty-five breakfasts a year. She'll hear it if she serves the following breakfast:

Orange Slices with Cranberry Jelly Cubes
Flaked Cereal with Cream
Buckwheat Cakes
Sausages
Coffee

The ingredients of the first dish consist of oranges and canned cranberry jelly.

Allow one medium orange for each person. Cut off peel, removing all the white fibre. Cut in slices crosswise and lay in an overlapping circle on plates. Cut some chilled cranberry jelly in small cubes, and pile about one heaping teaspoonful in center of each service of orange circles. This not only looks pretty, but the combination tastes mighty good.

Appetizing Coffee

The coffee that you serve at this breakfast should be of the kind you can't wait to taste—the kind the aroma of which is so tempting that you scald yourself with the first sip. It's easy to have coffee like that now that so many popular brands are put up in vacuum packed cans. These cans keep the coffee fresh until they are opened, and freshness is the principal thing—for fragrance, taste and strength—in the making of good coffee.

No oxygen can get to the coffee, you see, if it is enclosed in vacuum packed cans, and oxygen is the chief enemy of coffee. When exposed to it, the coffee gases quickly evaporate, and much of the taste and aroma is soon gone.

Pea Quality

WITH all the present agitation for dividing all canned foods into three fixed grades A, B and C, or making the labels on them so accurately descriptive that there can be no doubt of exactly what each can contains, it is interesting to speculate as to how these two alternative plans would apply to certain products.

Take peas, for instance. There are two types of canned peas. One is a smooth skinned variety which is generally called in the trade the Early June or Alaska. The other is a wrinkled skin variety which is often referred to as the Sweet Pea. They are slightly different in flavor, but both are delicious.

The size of the pea is also a factor. Peas are packed according to their size and are numbered from 1 to 6. The No. 1 or Petit Pois are the smallest. No. 1 peas cost more than the other sizes, not because they are superior in flavor but because fewer of them are canned and because it costs more to can them.

A Puzzling Question

How could peas, with these peculiarities of production, be successfully graded A, B and C? As a matter of fact, many think the larger sized peas, for example, the 3, 4 and 5, are so superior in flavor that they use the No. 1 pea chiefly as a dainty garnish for steaks, chops and roasts. Some packers put up a blend of the three most flavorful sizes and call this "run of the pod" or "ungraded." Which of all these products should be labeled A and be the most expensive?

In the present grades—Fancy, Extra Standard and Standard—the difference is the amount of starch in the peas, but there are all those other factors to be considered.*

Slip That Assures Perfect Frock Fit

PATTERN 2099

An axiom for nice grooming which every well-dressed woman knows by heart is that no frock can fit any better than the slip that's worn beneath it. That's why it is so important to have an abundance of trim slips in your wardrobe. As you see by the illustration, this model wraps around at the back, and can be perfectly adjusted to the figure by the belt which fastens in front. Result: no bunchiness or wrinkles to spoil the lines of your smartest frocks! And the fact that the back skirt is double makes the slip shadow-proof and long-wearing as well! Washable silk-crepe or sateen or one of the tubbable rayon materials would make up well in this design. Pattern 2099 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included. Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE. Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

GOLDEN DAWN

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt is a rising young psychiatrist. He is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a responsible criminal and obtains Burt's expert testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's faithful office nurse, is won over to her cause despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior.

CHAPTER III

Stephen elbowed his way into the courtroom. Nance Belden saw him, and from behind the bars of the prisoner's dock waved to him and called cheerily: "Hello, Steve."

"Silence—you!" the bailiff warned her.

Nance made a face at him; then, observing Stephen lay finger to lip in a warning gesture, she tossed her head, tilted her chin and bent upon the judge a cold and defiant stare.

The bailiff opened the door of the prisoners' dock and beckoned to her. "Nance Belden," the judge queried, "have you anything to say as to why sentence should not be pronounced upon you?"

"I've got a mouthpiece," the girl retorted. "Ask him!"

From a chair beside the counsels' table a young man arose. "May it please the court, the public defender has withdrawn from this case and I am now counsel for the defendant. My name is David Tyrrell. I am reliably informed, your honor, that, following a fair and impartial trial, this defendant has been convicted of the crime of which she stands accused and is now before the court for sentence."

"Mr. Tyrrell, your client is now under a suspended sentence from the Superior court, for the crime of grand theft. She was there sentenced to two years in San Quentin penitentiary, but paroled for two years. Less than two months have passed since she was paroled, and today she stands before the court for sentence under a charge of petit larceny. The defendant evidently is incorrigible, and I intend to remand her to the Superior court for commitment under the old charge of grand theft."

"I thank your honor. I have been retained in this apparently hopeless case for the purpose of adducing a sound reason why this defendant should be neither sentenced under the present charge nor remanded to the Superior court for commitment under sentence for the former crime. To that end, your honor, I ask leave to present an expert witness to testify to the mental irresponsibility of my client."

"One moment, please, Mr. Tyrrell. Your action would be merely wasting your time and that of the court. I shall remand the prisoner immediately to the Superior court, with a request to the judge thereof that her case be taken up immediately. I sentence this prisoner to ninety days in the county jail, but the sentence will be suspended during her good behavior for one year from date. A bailiff will conduct you, your expert witness and the defendant at once to Department Number Six of the Superior court, and I will immediately telephone to the judge and request that he listen to your expert witness."

As they entered the Superior court the judge glanced at a document which evidently had reached him from the police magistrate's court. "Mr. Tyrrell, I understand you desire to present some expert testimony in an effort to prove the mental irresponsibility of this defendant, Nance Belden. I may state that I have already been in telephonic communication with Doctor Blethen, and have had a complete report from him on this case. You may proceed, however, to present your side of it. Who is your witness?"

"Dr. Stephen Burt, your honor," and Tyrrell indicated Stephen.

"I know all about Doctor Burt," the judge said pleasantly. "I had him in my court a year ago as an expert witness in the matter of the Carter will case," he nodded to Stephen. "This court is very much interested in getting at the facts in this case and it is obliged to you for your voluntary attendance. What is your professional opinion of this girl's mentality?"

"I have not had a fair opportunity to study her, your honor," Stephen replied, "hence I am not in a position to give the court more than a snap decision."

"How long have you studied her?" "About thirty minutes, your honor." "H-m-m-m! Doctor Blethen examined her on three different occasions, his examinations embodying a total of about six hours' time."

"With all due deference to my distinguished colleague," Stephen replied with his singularly charming smile, "six hours is not usually considered more than sufficient time to form an approximate opinion, which subsequent investigations may set at variance. If this girl were to become a patient of mine today, I should devote many weeks to an effort to demonstrate that my original opinion regarding her was in error."

"Is she crazy, Doctor Burt?"

"Not in the sense that we customarily employ the term, your honor. I should say, rather, that her psychology is abnormal, that she is neither moral nor immoral, but unmoral. For instance, when I asked her why she stole silk stockings, she told me quite frankly that she did it because there were runs in all her old stockings. That reply was very illuminating. As I talked further with her I noted her valiant moods and quickly came to the conclusion that she is suffering from dissociation by reason of shock. In other words, this girl, who doubtless in happier days possessed a single personality and that a normal one, has now acquired a secondary personality. In plain English, two entirely different people inhabit the one body.

"The first personality, which I shall call A, is the result of acquired instincts, habit, education, and repressions imposed on society by convention and the code of procedure which we call morals. This has been submerged wholly or in part by a second personality, which I shall call B, and when B personality rules her she has amnesia for what I have termed her acquired or normal instincts. Out of her unconscious mind then emerge, as definite impulses to action, the old antipathies to such action, which we medical men term conflicts."

"Let me illustrate. We will assume that at this moment she is possessed of her personality A, and in this state she realizes she has runs in all her stockings—that she must have new stockings, but she sees some stockings which she can readily steal. Normal people often have impulses to steal, your honor, and Nance Belden has an impulse to steal the stockings she needs."

"But here a factor intervenes. She has been taught, from the day she manifested thought, that it is wrong to steal, and this moral lesson has impressed itself upon her conscious mind. With repetition, the thought, becoming have been a very potent reason for the commission of such an unintelligent act as theft. So immediately I commenced to question her as to her family, her past.

"She could tell me nothing. She is not at all sure that her name is Nance Belden, and I am satisfied that her inability to throw any light on her genesis was not born of a desire to withhold that information. I believe she has amnesia for a certain period of her life, and we know that such a condition is usually the result of a severe mental shock. In such cases the patient usually has an intense desire to forget absolutely the unhappy, unpleasant or terrifying episode or person that produced the shock, and so intense is the power of will in certain highly sensitive people, women particularly, that not infrequently they succeed! Thus amnesia is produced. It is, in a sense, autohypnosis, and your honor undoubtedly is aware that people who have been hypnotized remember nothing of what occurs during the hypnotic state."

"I believe I follow you," the judge murmured.

"I have shown you why the normal Nance Belden would not steal. But now comes that mental shock I spoke of, with consequent amnesia for all of her life that has preceded it; or it may be a part of that life. With the amnesia comes what we term dissociation or mental disintegration. The unconscious overwhelms the conscious; the acquired instincts of morality—social usage—drop out of the conscious into the unconscious, and the thoughts and impulses that have lain dormant and defeated in the unconscious are now in the saddle. Unfortunates who have acquired dual personalities or a dissociated personality go from one personality into the other and back again, with or without amnesia for the preceding state."

"At a time when Nance Belden's second personality (B) ruled her, and she decided to steal those stockings, she was acting under the impulse of an idea that could not be combated. To steal a habit, dropped out of her conscious mind to become conserved in her unconscious mind. Conserved there, it became a definite part of her personality—her soul, if you will. Thereafter it was not necessary to remind herself that it was wrong to steal. She knew it was, without having to think about it at all, and this unconscious knowledge was her protection in the fleeting moment of temptation, aroused by her definite need and the knowledge that, lacking money to buy the stockings, and faced with the absolute necessity for acquiring stockings, the sole alternative was to steal them. She got no further than that vague, conscious thought. Immediately the knowledge that it was immoral to steal—that nothing could possibly excuse theft—rose out of her unconscious mind and became a dominating conscious thought. Now, right there appeared the mental phenomenon known among psychiatrists as a complex or conflict. In all conflicts the stronger wins—and in this particular mental conflict, the will not to steal won instantly. It was an older habit of thought. It was an acquired instinct, whereas the impulse to steal was not a habit of thought, because she had never indulged in theft! We say we do a thing on instinct, but really we act after due, if inconspicuously brief cogitation, based on reason, which is the result of habituation to doing certain things."

"This Girl, Who Doubtless in Happier Days Possessed a Single Personality and That a Normal One, Has Now Acquired a Secondary Personality."

"This defendant, your honor, is a healthy girl as far as I can judge from outward appearances. But she is what you often hear referred to as high-strung. And she is so unusually intelligent that I readily realized there must had become an acquired instinct, or at least a very strong instinct. There may have been a certain amount of repression against the act at first, but gradually that repressive instinct, i. e., her moral instincts, once part of her conscious mind but now relegated to her unconscious mind, grew weaker, until finally the stronger instinct won, and the result is, we have Nance Belden up before your honor for commitment to San Quentin penitentiary on a suspended sentence for grand theft."

"Have you any theory as to what this mental shock might be, Doctor Burt?"

"I have a very definite theory as to what prepared the ground, so to speak, for the mental shock, but I have not the slightest idea of the nature of the shock."

"This is most interesting, Doctor Burt. Pray explain."

"Look carefully at this defendant, your honor. You see a young woman about five feet, five inches high—normal height for a woman of her age, which I imagine to be about twenty-one or twenty-two. How much do you weigh, Miss Belden?"

"A hundred and twenty-eight, Steve."

WHO REMEMBERS THOSE LONG AGO ASAFETIDA BAGS?

Webster's dictionary defines asafetida as a "feted gum resin of various Persian and East Indian apocynous plants. It is used as a medicine, and it has a strong odor and taste of garlic."

Mr. Webster is kind in his definition, as anyone who ever has worn one of the oldtime asafetida bags, so common to the last generation, will testify.

Scarcely 25 years ago, before children were reared on "bottled sunshine," sun lamps, violet rays and other modern scientific devices, asafetida bags were as much a part of rural school equipment as the copy-book and speller. In fact, they were more quickly recognized when the wearer entered those hot, steaming one-room schools on a mid-January morning.

It always seemed that one of the tragedies of life was the fact that the prettiest girl in the room wore an asafetida bag. It made her a marked person, and only a strong personality undoubtedly kept her from developing an inferiority complex. With the arrival of spring each year she was saved, as a diet of "garbs" and sassafras tea replaced the obnoxious bag she wore around her throat.

The agonies she must have endured in her mother's quest for health are unimaginable, and, indeed, her own children now owe science an undying vote of thanks for discoveries which eliminated the use of asafetida, at least in its most obtrusive form.

Possibly the one thing lacking in these modern air-conditioned school-rooms, where germs and disease are banned, is the old familiar smell of asafetida "which has a strong odor and taste of garlic." Granting that the scientific inventions of today are applied successfully with less wear and tear on the human body and disposition than the methods used in the last generation, yet may it not be that something of sentiment still lingers in the memories associated with its old uses?

Perhaps it is not too remote a suggestion that when the modern mother applies the "bottled sunshine" to Junior and Mary she sighs and possibly wishes for a return to those good old days when she wore an asafetida bag.—Boston Herald.

Cranberry Cultivation

Out of a total of 29,964 acres of cranberries in the United States, 14,000 are in Massachusetts and 13,000 in New Jersey. Cranberries are little grown outside of the United States. About 100 acres are being cultivated in Nova Scotia and they have been tried with little success in Norway, the Netherlands and Denmark.

Indians Well Named

The Snake Indians were so-called because of the characteristics of these natives in quickly concealing themselves when once discovered. They seemed to glide away in the grass, sagebrush, and rocks and disappear with all the subtlety of a serpent.

Founder Guillotined

Lavoisier, the founder of modern chemistry, was in 1794 sentenced to death and guillotined by the Revolutionary tribunal because he had, under the king, held the post of farmer general of the revenue.

Coffee Rules

YOU'VE read them, dozens of them—lists of rules for making good coffee. But none of the lists is any good if the coffee isn't good which means, among other things, fresh. To make a good cup of coffee out of coffee that isn't fresh to start with is as hopeless a task as the traditional effort to "make a silk purse out of a sow's ear." It just can't be done.

But if you start right, with good fresh coffee, and apply a good set of rules, the results are fine. There's an infallible way to get good fresh coffee, too. Select any brand you want so long as it's a brand that retails its coffee in vacuum packed cans. If you don't use one of those, switch to one of them because vacuum packed coffee is the only coffee that comes to you always strictly fresh. It can't get stale on a grocer's shelf or your own if it's packed that way, because it absolutely excludes oxygen which is what makes coffee get stale.

All the Same

As for the rules for making the brew after you have made sure of good fresh coffee, they are all approximately the same. The next step is measuring the amounts of coffee and water carefully with an accurate measuring cup and spoon. You should use two level measuring tablespoons of coffee to each level measuring cup of water. This is the rule no matter what type of coffee-making device you use. Never let coffee boil because that ruins the flavor, and never let it stand more than half an hour if you want the flavor to be perfect.*
